HOW TO GRAB THE RIGHT OPPORTUNITY

During the placement season many students are faced with the dilemma of choosing the right company, right profile and/or right time to enter the corporate world. They often are posed with questions like, 'How to choose between a big company but with a low package and a start up with a good package.' When should one accept an offer letter, which is the best company for them etc. in this month's Newsletter, we address this very dilemma and present to you a well carved and research solution.

HERE ARE FEW STEPS YOU SHOULD FOLLOW BEFORE YOU MAKE A CHOICE:

Research the company: Go through the company reviews and rating by employees on websites. Check the company's vision and mission statement and culture of the company you wish to work for also check for the perks and benefits the company is offering. List down the companies: Gather the list of companies that visit your campus. Prioritize the companies you are interested in, identify your reason for selection and upgrade yourself with latest happening in the industry. Talk to your senior batch mates, friends, professor and placement officer to get as much as information possible. Choose your domain carefully: Decide what attracts you and choose your area of specialization and internship wisely. Invest all your energy in preparing for the selection process of the domain in which you prefer to specialize. Be updated with the placement Cell: Every campus has its own process and rules to follow. Understand the placement rule of your college. Attend presentation arranged by the placement team. Carefully study the do's and don'ts in different situation clearly mentioned rules and regulation of the placement cell.

Close out offer: whether you are getting a good deal or not depends upon how many simultaneous competing job offers you get through and whether the firm is considering people other than you. If you have limited option, adopt a softer negotiation approach to reduce the risk of landing no job offer at all.

Off Campus Play: Develop a strong off campus game. As a lateral, campus hiring is not the only source of placements. You will find opportunities both outside campus and after graduation. Start early and reach out to companies that are not hiring from your campus. Use LinkedIn and your own research to discover and apply for relevant position.

The best company for you is a company that aligns with your values goals and work style. Company culture is the personality of a company and one of the main things you must start paying attention before you accept an offer, or even apply for a job. It's the work environment, values, mission and goals of the company that would stick with you for long, so pick wisely.
